

I strongly oppose the imposition of artificial restrictions on the right of broadcast media to broadcast any lawful content in any market. Regulatory restrictions limit consumer choice, erode confidence in the idea of the free market, and entail needless waste of administrative resources. In the absence of abuse, the FCC should leave the question of competition in marketplaces to the market.